Breaking stereotypes and creating her own mark is our OTF Scholar Sawera Raees; the first female engineering student in her family and also from her town, who is also on a mission to bring about a change in what people think women can and cannot do. Inspired by her uncles who are also engineers; Sawera since her early years was always fond of figuring out how things work and the science behind it; hence choosing a career that builds on her passion as well and makes her a shining light in the list of OTF scholars.
